Frightful Suicide of a Virginian in Baltimore.

James E. Price, an unmarried man, fortye, committed suicide Thurs day morning by cutting his throat with a razor, at his boarding-house, 156 west Lombard street, near Sharp. He has been suffering for the last three days from an attack of delirium tremens. Last March Price broke his leg, and since then was confined to the house until a few days ago, when he went out on crutches, and his absence from business seemed to depress his spirits. Last Monday while out he met a companion, who invited him to a glass of liquor. Price continued drinking Monday and a portion of next day. On Tuesday night the attack of delirium tremens was renewed, and since then Price continued to think and talk of imaginary evils. His condition grew gradually worse, and on Wednesday Dr. Salzer was called and prescribed sulphate of morphia in sufficient quantities to allay the frenzy and produce sleep. On Wednesday night a medical student administered the dose, and found Price speaking as if he imagined that he would be bound to a pillory and flogged for some imaginary offence. He succeeded in quieting the unfortunate

On the same day, while he was quietly speaking to some of his fellow-boarders, he remarked that he would be taken to jail that evening, and ran out in the yard. He then again returned and entreated one of the boarders not to shoot him, as he would not on the door of the lady occupying the adwhether he had committed a theft.

Early vesterday morning he again seemed composed, and spoke to a number of boarders who had come to visit him in his room. At half-past seven, while the boarders were enjoying their breakfast, they heard a noise as that of struggling from the room occupied by Price. Mrs. Hurst, the proprietress of the boarding-house, ran up stairs, and found Price lying on the floor weltering in blood, his throat cut from ear to ear, and almost severed from his body. He was still alive, and Mr. R. J. Bell, one of the boarders, who was the next to enter the room, noticed him moving convulsively and United States Mail Vessels in the Slave the resolution of Mr. J. bureau, and another at the door, the clothes of the deceased being also covered with blood. On the bureau was a razor and lather, showing that Price must have stood before the looking-glass shaving himself when he committed the deed. After cutting his throat Price must have walked from the bureau to the door and then again to the bureau, where he fell. When Mr. Bell spoke to him, Price, who was lying on the floor, looked up, but could not speak. He ceased to breathe in ten minutes. The deceased had been employed by West & Sons, coal-oil merchants, 115 west Lombard street, for the past eight years, and had always borne a good reputation. He has no relatives in this city, his parents residing in Winchester, Va. Mr. West took charge of the body yesterday, but the father of the deceased telegraphed that it be sent to him. CHARLESTOWN, MASS., March 25, 1869. Mr. H. R. Stevens: Dear Sir.-The following is a statement perience with the great blood remedy, VEGETINE.
I have been keeping a boarding-house here for many years, and have had the misfortune to have a great deal of sickness in my family. In one case in parthenlar I noticed the wonderful effect of VEGETINE: About the year 1847 a young man, then sixteen vears old, who was a distant relative of mine, came home from sea. He had injured his left leg on board the ship some months before, and when the ship came into this port he came to my house, being so feeble that he could not go to his home in Lowell. His leg was swollen above the knee more than twice its natural size, and he was obliged to drag it along after him, having no use of it whatever. The effect of this had reduced him to a mere skeleton. His father came down and employed Dr. George Hayward, of Boston, to attend him, who then occupied a prominent position in the Massachusetts General Hospital. He pronounced it a bad case of necrosis: Hospital. He pronounced it a bad case of necrosis aid he must be removed to the hospital, have his leg pened, and the bone bored, to allow the discharge

After taking it regularly for six weeks his leg was but little swollen, and his general health so much improved that he did not look like the same person. At the end of five months he went home to Lowell perfectly cured. He remained in Lowell until the commencement of the war; then joined the army, and was pronounced a sound and
